1862 Epiphany Church had its beginning as a mission. The Rev. Henry J. Kershaw, the Rector of Trinity Church, Upper Marlboro, was responsible for the development of the Epiphany mission.

1862 A small box-like wooden structure was erected.

1869 The first confirmation service was held.

1871 Epiphany Church became an independent parish. Epiphany sponsored, as a mission, Christ Church, Clinton, Maryland. It also served the Addison Chapel (St. Mathews), Seat Pleasant, Maryland.

1887 A bell tower was added to the church building.

1888 During the tenure of Rev. William Brayshaw, the vestry authorized the construction of a rectory, with an adjacent stable and carriage house. The construction was completed within two years.

1937 Mr. W.W. Griffith purchased acreage for the expansion of the cemetery. Subsequently, a Superintendent's House and a caretaker dwelling were erected.

1960 The parish hall was constructed.

1981 During the tenure of Rev. John F. Crist, the parish had 237 communicants. Epiphany Church participated in a partnership with Episcopal Churches to develop the Collington Life Project. This project evolved into the Collington Retirement Community in Prince George's County, Maryland.

1998 Following a period of steady decline in members and mounting expenses, Epiphany Episcopal Church joined with the Holy Redeemer Mission on Easter Sunday 1998. The joining of the two congregations was facilitated by Bishop Jane Dixon, who helped break-down barriers and build new bridges.

1999 – 2005 During this period, Rev. James Anderson served as the first African American Rector of Epiphany Church. Rev. Anderson, who formerly served as the Episcopal Chaplain at the U.S. Air Force Academy, devoted himself to rejuvenating the youth programs of the parish. Christian formation programs were started, including Vacation Bible School and a thriving Sunday School Program.

Mid 2000s Following the departure of Rev. Anderson, the parish entered a period of reliance upon supply priests. This period allowed the church to examine its mission and to set new goals, with an emphasis on relationship building and community engagement. Book workshops and rotating dinner sessions were conducted by the parishioners. Partnerships were explored with the community public schools, including Longfields Elementary School.

2008 – 2011 The tenure of Rev. Allan Taylor-Johnson brought a continuation of the parish's community engagement efforts as the Friday Night Jazz Program was initiated. Epiphany quarterly newsletters were circulated, and a more formal partnership was established with Longfields Elementary School. Rev. Johnson deployed his financial management skills to minimize the impacts of the 2008 nationwide Financial Crisis on the church's financial resources. He brought more rigorous oversight of our financial systems and helped plan for future contingencies. The focus on the youth of the parish continued during this period as the Journey Toward Adulthood program was initiated and thrived.

In 2011, the congregation undertook a new program of Building God's Kingdom through a new dynamic model of leadership called Orpheus. Under this model, leadership of ministries and projects flowed seamlessly between volunteer parishioners and appointed leaders to ensure that our operation continued to move forward to new heights.

2011 - 2024 With the departure of Rev. Johnson the church once again found itself relying upon supply priests, but now had the added ministry tool of the Orpheus project. In the midst of the Orpheus project, Rev. Prince Decker was called to serve as the next Rector of Epiphany Church.

During Pastor Decker's tenure, the church became more globally focused with increased participation from members of the West African communities in the Washington, D.C. region. In addition, Epiphany and other Episcopal Churches in the region, were awarded a grant which provided greater support for the Friday Night Jazz programs. Epiphany also received a grant from Prince George's County Historic Society and Parks and Planning to paint the exterior of the church building. During this period, Epiphany also leveraged the parish hall (as Canterbury Hall) to serve as an event site that significantly enhanced the resources of the parish. Finally, this period served as an immense challenge for the parish as the Covid Pandemic caused losses associated with the Canterbury Hall program and dramatic declines in church attendance. The church is still coping with the impacts of the Pandemic.
